

A11

Edmond Locard, now often thought of as “the father of forensic science”, is credited with saying, “Any action of an individual, and obviously, the violent action constituting a crime, cannot occur without leaving a trace.” The Locard “Exchange” Principle is now given as “Every Contact Leaves a Trace”.

La Police et les méthodes scientifiques (1934), page 8