

A12

Alphonse Bertillon (1853 – 1914), born to an eminent father (doctor, anthropologist and demographer) became fascinated with the human skeleton after pursuing an elementary medical training course. He was appointed as a clerk in the premier bureau of the Prefecture of Police in 1879, and developed his system of anthropological measurements which became known as the Bertillon System.